Reports To: Strategy Lead

About ActionDignity

ActionDignity's mission is to collaborate with ethnocultural, racialized, and equity-seeking groups to create transformational changes in communities and society. Our approach is to catalyze collective impact by building the capacity of grassroots racialized community members to strengthen their communities and advance systems change. This is achieved through a range of programs that create impact at multiple levels, including individuals, families, communities, and policy advocacy. Currently, ActionDignity delivers programs focused on social inclusion and economic empowerment, mental health, workers' rights, gender equity, public safety and youth empowerment, using the intersectional lens of anti-racism.

About the Project

The Social Inclusion and Economic Empowerment Project (SIEEP) is an initiative that addresses poverty, inequality, and social exclusion by combining community engagement, economic empowerment, systems change, and policy advocacy. SIEEP strengthens social and professional connections for racialized newcomers while building the capacity of ethnocultural communities to influence systems, improve equitable access to opportunities, and advance community-led solutions. The project works collaboratively with community members, ethnocultural organizations, immigrant-serving organizations, mainstream institutions, employers, and government stakeholders to create sustainable change at the individual, community, and systems levels. The project is funded by the City of Calgary and United Way of Calgary and Area.
